

ETSU Weightlifting Program

The ETSU Center of Excellence for Sport Science and Coach Education, along with the Olympic Training Site were started by Dr. Mike Stone and his wife Meg Stone. They are known around the globe and have close to 100 years of coaching experience between the two of them. They have developed the graduate students in the program to be excellent coaches, researchers, and sport scientists. Our program encompasses many different aspects not found in other training facilities. We have professors that are experts not only in sport science, but also in sport nutrition, biomechanics, and power development.

The mission of the ETSU Olympic Training Site weightlifting program is to develop an athlete to an Olympic Gold medalist. In order to pursue this mission, our program is characterized by rigorous applications of sport science and is supported by financial assistance for our resident student weightlifters in the form of scholarships through the university.
